BRIEF

Caretaker gets jail time in autistic woman's death

The caretaker whose autistic ward died under mysterious circumstances after wandering away in a crowded department store pleaded guilty to criminal charges on Wednesday.

Hussanatu Wulu pleaded guilty to a charge of neglect of a care-dependent person and was sentenced to one to two years in prison under terms of a plea deal, reports say.

Wulu was in charge of the care of Christina Sankey, 37, shown, who was autistic, when Sankey wandered off as Wulu shopped in a Macy's store on March 6, 2014.

The exact sequence of events that followed has never been established, but Sankey was found dead the next morning on North 57th Street in West Philadelphia street after officers were flagged down by a concerned citizen around 6:30 a.m. on March 7.

The cause of death was later ruled to be exposure to cold temperatures.

"Christina Sankey needed constant supervision, and her Individual Support Plan and companion care needs reflected that," DA Seth Williams said in a statement announcing criminal charges against Wulu in April. "Simply put, Hussanatu Wulu failed at her job and didn't follow her training and emergency procedures, so Christina wandered out into the cold March weather in 2014 to die alone." METRO

What kind of citizen are you?

A man walks the streets of Philadelphia. CHARLES MOSTOLLER

A new Pew poll divides up Philadelphia residents not by demographics, but by attitudes.

DAN KELLEY
@MetroPhilly
dan.kelley@metro.us

A new study by the Pew Charitable Trusts divides residents into four categories that illuminate their feelings on Philly life.

The biggest category, Dissatisfied Citizens, tend to have more trouble making ends meet, are more likely to say they distrust the police and think local government has paid too much attention to Center City over neighborhoods. About 30 percent of residents fall into this category

One in four people are classified as die-hard loyalists. They tend to be older and tend to want the city to do more to retain long-time residents. They love their neighbors, support labor unions and tend not to make much money.

Uncommitted Skeptics tend to be young and view the suburbs with longing. This group makes up about one in four Philly residents, and 97 percent of them said it would be easy to leave if the right circumstances came along.

The smallest group is made up of what Pew calls Enthusiastic Urbanists. They tend to feel safe in their neighborhoods, would find it hard to leave and say the city should prioritize attracting new residents to retaining existing ones.

Larry Eichel, director of Pew's Philadelphia research initiative said the survey was designed to look at city residents not by demographics like age, race and income, but by attitude.

"The most striking thing to me is that a quarter of residents fall into the category of uncommitted skeptics," Eichel said. "A lot of them are young, well educated, and in decent financial shape that makes it easy for them to leave."

Despite their differences, the four groups agreed on some things. They tend to believe that public education, jobs and public safety should be the city's top priority.

And they generally believe that new immigrants tend to bring vibrancy and vitality to city life.

All groups have negative views of the city's education system. But Enthusiastic Urbanists, who tend to have the most education, also have the least negative views of city schools.

The groups tend to be distributed throughout the city, Eichel said, but he noted that about 35 percent of the people categorized as Uncommitted Skeptics hail from the northeast.

Metro asked Eichel if the high proportion of Uncommitted Skeptics means that the city's relatively recent gains in population are fragile.

"We describe them as not sold," Eichel said. "It doesn't mean they've turned against the city. It means they aren't sold."

Meet the teens who want to be cops

At a time of increased scrutiny of police, PPD Explorer Cadet program keeps growing.

DAN KELLEY
@MetroPhilly
dan.kelley@metro.us

When William McGuckin, started in the Philadelphia Police Department's Explorer Cadet program, he wasn't sure he wanted to be a cop.

There were times as a teenager when McGuckin, now 21, spent all day directing traffic in subfreezing temperatures. And the organizers of the program were quick to tell him that, yeah — that's what cops do sometimes.

"I went to an agricultural high school," McGuckin said. "I was facing the other direction."

Somewhere along the line, he made the decision to apply to the Philadelphia Police Department.

His decision comes at a time when protesters and civil rights activists across the country are shining a spotlight on police abuse — sometimes through the use of ubiquitous cell phone cameras.

A nationwide poll by Pew Research Center in 2014 found young people tend to have lower opinions of police than their older counterparts. According to the survey, 47 percent of adults ages 18 to 29 say police departments do a poor job of holding officers accountable, compared to 41 percent of adults aged 30 to 49, and 30 percent of adults aged 50 to 64.

So that begs the question — what kind of teen would want to be a police officer?

Cpl. Bryan Coyle, who runs the department's explorer program, said lots of kids do.

The program has "been growing," Coyle said.

Dozens of Explorer Cadets were inducted by Commissioner Charles Ramsey during a ceremony at the Fraternal Order of Police headquarters in Northeast Philly on Tuesday night. CHARLES MOSTOLLER

"I like the discipline, I like to help others and I want to make a difference."

Chelsea Rivera, 19, Explorer Cadet

On Tuesday night, Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey swore in 95 cadets — some as young as 14.

Not all of them will go on to law enforcement, Coyle said, and not all who do will go on to work for the Philadelphia Police Department — some apply to jobs in the suburbs or in other states.

The Explorer Cadets themselves, many of whom have barely begun to shave, run the gamut, but the common theme is that they all hope to help people.

Some are the children of police officers.

"I've wanted to be a police officer my whole life," said Matt McLaughlin, 20. "My dad is a cop. My brother is a cop. It's in my blood."

Then there are people still figuring it out.

Chelsea Rivera, 19, was at South Philadelphia High School when police officers recommended the program.

"I like the discipline, I like to help others, and I want to make a difference," Rivera said.

Still, she doesn't know that she'll become an officer. She also did a stint in a Junior ROTC program, and she's trying to figure out whether the military or the police department are for her.

The cadets are aware of the changing attitudes about police.

Some, like Daniel Flanagan, 17 and the son of two Philadelphia cops, said it doesn't faze them.

McGuckin said there are a few bad apples. He doesn't intend to be one of them.

"I don't think people dislike cops," McGuckin said.

It's a program that straddles the line between the department perennial challenge of recruitment and its efforts to reach out to the community. Successful cadets see a requirement for 60 college credits, about two years' worth, waived.

The department believes one factor keeping some kids out: Not all of them can get to the police academy on Saturdays.

So, Ramsey announced Tuesday that the department will hosting explorer units in all of its police districts.

Drug sentencing reform measure moves ahead in US House

Efforts to reduce mandatory minimum prison sentences for certain federal drug offenses advanced in the U.S. House of Representatives on Wednesday with committee approval of a bipartisan bill that will head to the full House for consideration.

Like the Senate version, approved at the committee level in September, the House bill would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for two- and three-strike non-violent offenders.

Advocates of such reforms, which appear to be gaining traction in Congress, say it would be more just and reduce prison overcrowding. The chairmen of the Senate and House judiciary committee back the bills, improving the chances.

Opponents say lowering mandatory minimum sentences reduces their deterrent effect against future crime.

Federal inmates' average time spent in prison reached 37.5 years in 2012, twice as much as in 1988, with the average time served by drug offenders rising 150 percent over the period, according to a Pew Charitable Trusts study released Wednesday.

Many of the provisions in the House and Senate sentencing bills would be retroactive, so some inmates now serving time could see their sentences reduced.

House bill Republican sponsor Representative Bob Goodlatte, said retroactivity would not apply to offenders who served 13 months or more in prison for a prior serious violent felony.

The Senate bill includes prison reforms, while the House version does not affect offenders post-sentencing. REUTERS

Honduras detains five Syrians said to be headed to US with stolen Greek passports

Honduran authorities have detained five Syrian nationals who were trying to reach the United States using stolen Greek passports, but there are no signs of any links to last week's attacks in Paris, police said.

The Syrian men were held late on Tuesday in the Honduran capital, Tegucigalpa, on arrival from Costa Rica, and had been planning to head to the border with neighboring Guatemala. The passports had been doctored to replace the photographs with those of the Syrians, police said.

"We received information from [fellow] police services that these five Syrians left Greece and passed through Turkey, Brazil, Argentina and San Jose in Costa Rica before finally reaching Tegucigalpa," said Anibal Baca, spokesman for Honduras' police. "They are normal Syrians."

Republican lawmakers defied President Barack Obama on Wednesday and set out plans following last week's deadly Paris attacks to tighten screening of Syrian refugees.

Obama has pledged to take in 10,000 Syrians next year from the war-torn country. But his plan faces stiff resistance from Republicans, concerned some of the refugees could be associated with Islamic State.

Reports that at least one of the Paris attackers was believed to have slipped into Europe among migrants registered in Greece prompted several Western countries to begin to question their willingness to take in refugees.

Americans split on abortion as Supreme Court takes case: poll

Americans are split over abortion restrictions like those in a Texas law challenged before the U.S. Supreme Court, reflecting deep and longstanding divisions over the contentious issue, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll released Wednesday.

In the online poll of 3,387 U.S. adults, 41 percent of respondents said laws like the one in Texas are intended to make abortion clinics safer; 35 percent said such laws are designed to make it difficult or impossible for women to obtain abortions; and 24 percent said they did not know.

The 2013 Texas law mandated costly hospital-grade standards for abortion clinics and required doctors who perform abortions to have admitting privileges at nearby hospitals.

Women hold up signs during a pro-choice rally. GETTY IMAGES

In the poll, 43 percent of respondents said abortion should be legal in most or all cases; 41 percent said it should be illegal in most or all cases; and 16 percent said they were unsure.

Views on abortion in the United States have changed very little over decades, according to historical polling data maintained by Gallup.

The high court last Friday said it would hear a legal challenge brought by abortion providers to the Republican-backed law, its first major abortion case since the justices upheld a federal ban on a late-term abortion procedure in 2007.

Asked how they felt the Supreme Court should rule in the Texas case, 33 percent of poll respondents said the justices should strike down the law; 32 percent said they should uphold it; and 36 percent said they did not know.

The Supreme Court legalized abortion in its landmark 1973 Roe v. Wade ruling. But a woman's right to terminate a pregnancy remains a controversial issue among Americans. Some states have sought to restrict abortion.

Ten states have imposed doctor-admitting-privilege requirements like those in Texas, while six have laws requiring hospital-grade facilities for abortion clinics mirroring the Texas law, according to the Center for Reproductive Rights, which represents abortion providers in the case before the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court is set to hear arguments in the case in early spring, with a ruling due by the end of June. REUTERS

Senators vow to block climate aid, scrutinize Paris deal

Senate Republicans on Wednesday said Congress would not approve the Obama administration's $500 million request for its first payment into a United Nations climate fund, a move they said would undermine the climate change summit in Paris.

"This president is going to go [to Paris] with no money," said Republican Sen. Shelley Moore Capito of West Virginia. She chaired a hearing of the Senate environment panel on the international climate negotiations, which begin Nov. 30.

Capito and other Republican members of the committee said they will ensure any deal the U.S. strikes in Paris will face congressional scrutiny, and warned they will block President Barack Obama's 2016 budget request for the first tranche of the $3 billion pledged last year to the U.N. Green Climate Fund.

"Without Senate approval [of a climate agreement], there will be no money," added Sen. John Barrasso of Wyoming, acknowledging that guarantees of climate aid to developing countries is "the linchpin" of the Paris climate conference. REUTERS

FRED BEANS REPEATS HISTORIC USED CAR SALE

Doylestown, PA – Fred Beans, CEO and founder of the Fred Beans Automotive Group located in Doylestown, PA, has announced a ONE DAY SALE on Saturday, November 21st at 9:00AM, where pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.* This sale is being held due to overwhelming public demand.

Cars will be clearly marked, so come early for the best selection. This is a ONE DAY ONLY sale designed to get the local community driving again.

Fred Beans' pre-owned inventory levels need to be reduced to make room for shipments of new models arriving daily. As a result, all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations are selling these overstocked pre-owned vehicles to the public at drastic discounts in an attempt to clear excess inventory.

Along with this huge variety of pre-owned vehicles, the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships in Doylestown features new Ford, Lincoln, Mitsubishi, Dodge, Chrysler, Jeep, Hyundai, Nissan, Subaru, Chevrolet, Cadillac, Buick, and GMC vehicles.

Fred Beans believes reviving the economy starts at home, and changing things locally will lead to changing things nationally.

Along with the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships' extra inventory, additional vehicles have been acquired at incredible prices for this sale from various banks, repossession companies, auto auctions, credit unions, lease companies, and rental companies.

The sale will make pre-owned vehicles available for as low as $999,* prices not normally offered to the general public. According to Fred Beans, "We want to give our customers a reason to believe in the local economy again. Someone has to look out for their best interest."

Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM to inspect the entire inventory and find the car that's right for them. Every vehicle will be cleaned, detailed, and fully prepared for instant delivery. On the evening of November 20th, after the close of business, Mr. Beans and his team will mark the special sale price on each and every vehicle. Because Fred Beans' customers are feeling the credit crunch right now, the Fred Beans Automotive Group has given the dealerships' financing managers the resources necessary to get most customers' credit approved on the spot.

The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships has $10 million in lending power, the result of over 50 years of strong relationships with the area's leading lenders. This means that customers with a less-than-perfect credit history can have their credit approved and drive home a quality pre-owned car, truck, or SUV by lunchtime on Saturday.

Even if a customer's credit report shows a bankruptcy, divorce, tax lien, slow payment history, missed payment, or repossession or if a customer is a first-time buyer, Fred Beans may get them approved.

This special ONE DAY ONLY sale will be held at all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations this Saturday, November 21st at 9:00AM.

Pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.* Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM for the start of inspection. Incredible sale prices, starting as low as $999,* will be posted no later than 8:00AM. All vehicles will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships is expecting a high volume of customers for this sale, so be sure to reserve your spot early.

Customers wishing to trade in a vehicle are asked to bring their title or payment book for immediate delivery. Fred Beans will even pay off your trade-in in full, no matter how much you still owe on it.*

Islamic State says 'Schweppes bomb' used to bring down Russian plane

The downed aircraft, an Airbus A321 operated by Metrojet, had been carrying Russians from an Egyptian resort to Saint Petersburg when it broke up over Sinai.

Putin GETTY IMAGES

"We will find them anywhere on the planet and punish them."

Putin said of the plane bombers at a somber Kremlin meeting

Islamic State's official magazine carried a photo on Wednesday of a Schweppes drink it said was used to make an improvised bomb that brought down a Russian airliner over Egypt's Sinai Peninsula last month, killing all 224 people on board.

The photo showed a can of Schweppes Gold soft drink and what appeared to be a detonator and switch on a blue background, three simple components that if genuine are likely to cause concern for airline safety officials worldwide.

"The divided Crusaders of the East and West thought themselves safe in their jets as they cowardly bombarded the Muslims of the Caliphate," the English language Dabiq magazine said in reference to Russia and the West. "And so revenge was exacted upon those who felt safe in the cockpits."

Western governments have said the plane was likely brought down by a bomb and Moscow confirmed on Tuesday it had reached the same conclusion, but the Egyptian government says it has still not found evidence of criminal action.

Islamic State also published a photo of what it said were passports belonging to dead Russians "obtained by the mujahideen." It was not immediately possible to verify the authenticity of the published photos.

The group, which has seized large swathes of Syria and Iraq, said it had exploited a loophole at Sharm al-Sheikh airport, where the plane originated, in order to smuggle a bomb on board.

The airport is widely used by budget and charter airlines to fly tourists to the nearby resorts on the Sinai coast.

Islamic State said it had initially planned to bring down a plane belonging to a country participating in the U.S.-led coalition bombing it in Syria and Iraq, but it changed course after Moscow started its own airstrikes campaign in Syria.

"A bomb was smuggled onto the airplane, leading to the deaths of 219 Russians and five other crusaders only a month after Russia's thoughtless decision," it said.

Egypt's interior minister told a news conference in Sharm al-Sheikh on Tuesday that there was "no information" about security lapses at the airport.

Islamic State's Egyptian branch, Sinai Province, claimed responsibility for the attack the day it happened but Egyptian officials were quick to dismiss talk of a bomb as premature.

Egypt is battling an Islamist insurgency in the Sinai, a strategic peninsula bordering Israel, Gaza and the Suez Canal. But Islamic State said the airline attack was primarily planned as a response to Russian and Western airstrikes.

"This was to show the Russians and whoever allies with them that they will have no safety in the lands and airspace of the Muslims," the group wrote. "That their daily killing of dozens in [Syria] through their airstrikes will only bring them calamities."

Russia, an ally of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, launched airstrikes against opposition groups in Syria including Islamic State, on Sept. 30.

On Tuesday, Russian President Vladimir Putin vowed to hunt down those responsible for blowing up the plane and offered a $50 million reward for information leading to those responsible. REUTERS

Holiday delays likely at US airports as security tightens

Millions of Americans traveling next week for the Thanksgiving holiday likely should expect airport delays from tighter security prompted by extremist attacks in Paris.

Although federal officials have been mum about potential measures, police at such airports as Atlanta's Hartfield-Jackson, the world's busiest, and Douglas International in Charlotte, North Carolina, have heightened vigilance after the attacks in Paris.

Tighter security could translate into longer lines for passengers over Thanksgiving on Nov. 26, the top U.S. holiday for travel, as agents spend more time checking passengers and bags, analysts said.

"The chances are good that you're going to see longer waits because of security," said Christopher Elliott, a travel writer and consumer advocate.

"If there is another terrorism event, all bets are off then," he said. Elliott said travelers should add 30 minutes to the time airports advised them to arrive to make flights.

Thanksgiving is the top travel holiday of the year. AAA, the motorist advocacy group, estimates that 46.9 million Americans will travel over the holiday, with 3.6 million going by plane. REUTERS

Gwen Stefani was her own inspiration for divorce

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Apparently Gwen Stefani talking to a radio station about her divorce is a weekly thing now, and this week she's getting much more candid. And get this: Stefani found inspiration to split up with husband Gavin Rossdale by … listening to her old No Doubt breakup songs. "I go back and listen to a lot of that stuff and get sick," she tells Washington, D.C.'s 94.7 Fresh FM. "You look at the song and go, 'That was a red flag and that was a moment where I was feeling just as bad as I do today and why did I keep it up?'"

As for the divorce itself? She's looking on the bright side. "I wish it didn't happen. I wish that all this wasn't happening, but it was part of my life journey," she says. "In my life I've had two really bad heartbreaks, but I've written some really incredible music out of it." See? She really is a big fan or her work.

All about Tom Brady's political aspirations

Some Patriots fans are eager to see Tom Brady head into politics after he's done with football — by running for governor of Massachusetts or, dare say, president — but the man himself is here to rain on that parade. "There is a 0.000 chance of me ever wanting to do that. I just think that no matter what you'd say or what you'd do, you'd be in a position where — you know, you're politicking. You know?" he tells GQ Magazine. "Like, I think the great part about what I do is that there's a scoreboard. At the end of every week, you know how you did. You know how well you prepared. You know whether you executed your game plan. There's a tangible score. I think in politics, half the people are going to like you and half the people are not going to like you, no matter what you do or what you say." See? He just wants to be liked.

Cone Solidarity

What's a hardcore rapper who's also a sympathetic dog owner supposed to do when his four-legged friend ends up in a post-vet cone of shame? Cone solidarity, that's what.

This music video — that also benefits animal rescue charity the Amanda Foundation — is utterly ridiculous and delightful …and then the sweet vocal bridge kicks in and it becomes sublime. Let's all don a cone. And relax with a scone.

David Beckham is the Sexiest Man Alive

If you were doubting the exact sexiness level of David Beckham, doubt no more. Beckham has been dubbed the Sexiest Man Alive for 2015 by People magazine. Jimmy Kimmel announced the news, with Beckham appearing via Skype. "I would obviously like to thank my parents for bringing me into this world, of course. I would like to thank my hairdresser, my stylist," he joked. He was a bit more serious with the magazine itself: "I never feel that I'm an attractive, sexy person," Beckham tells People. "I mean, I like to wear nice clothes and nice suits and look and feel good, but I don't ever think of myself that way." That makes one of us. Runners up for this year's title include Chris Hemsworth, George Clooney, Brad Pitt, Channing Tatum and a slew of other famous white guys.

Adele sings not about heartbreak for once

Adele is the queen of heartbreak. Her breakup songs bring listeners to tears, conjuring up memories of loves past and lost. When she released "Hello" a few weeks ago, it teased that her new album would continue her lonely-hearts song trend, despite the fact that she has a long-term partner in Simon Konecki. But this week she dropped her new single, "Water Under The Bridge," and it's about her being happy in love. Adele tells Beats 1 Radio that the song is about her waiting for Konecki to treat her badly. But it just didn't happen. "'Water Under The Bridge' is more like, I'm waiting for him to be horrible but I don't think he's gonna be, waiting for the relationship to end. This is the relationship now that I'm gonna be in. It was quite a ground-breaking moment," she says. EMILY LAURENCE

Revisiting the Blacklist

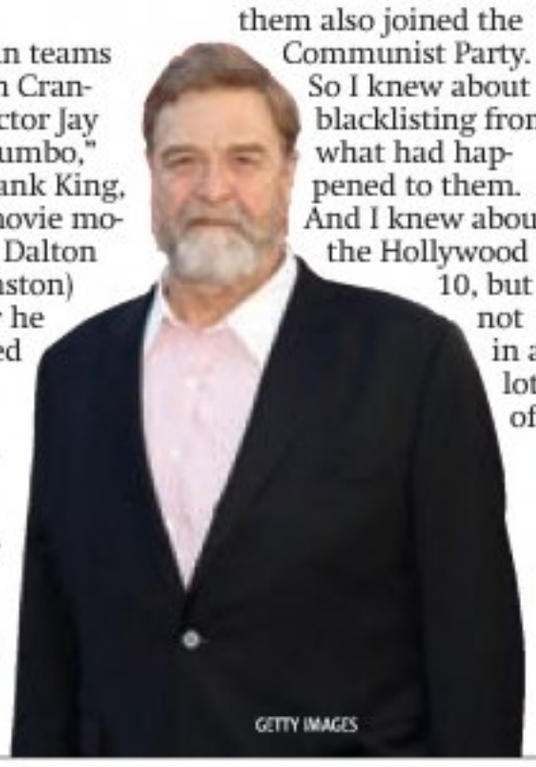
NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

John Goodman teams up with Bryan Cranston and director Jay Roach for "Trumbo," starring as Frank King, the brash B-movie mogul who kept Dalton Trumbo (Cranston) working after he was blacklisted from Hollywood in the 1950s. Goodman doesn't think we've come that far since then.



GETTY IMAGES

How familiar were you with Dalton Trumbo's story?

When I became interested in acting, I was drawn to the people from the Group Theater in New York and a lot of them went on to become very famous acting teachers. But then a lot of them also joined the Communist Party. So I knew about blacklisting from what had happened to them. And I knew about the Hollywood 10, but not in a lot of great detail. I'd admired Dalton Trumbo, but my God, I had no idea he was as prolific as he was.

John Goodman stars as Frank King in "Trumbo." HILARY BRONWYN GAIL/BLEECKER STREET

How about your character, Frank King? Were you at all familiar him and his brother?

No, I didn't know a thing about them. I found out what I could find out on the Internet. You know, these guys were the same kind of people that founded the motion picture studios in the first place. They were involved in the pinball business, saw a way to make a quick buck. They were just there to make money and nothing else.

It almost seems strange now how much people freaked out over Communism.

It doesn't seem strange to me at all and it doesn't seem like we've learned our lessons very well. People are very good at manipulating fear for their own ends and for power. We have a lot of lobbyists doing it, we have a lot of politicians who are buying into it. And these days of social media, it's becoming tribal almost — the group-shaming of people, beating up on people. It's very good at turning individuals into mobs — "this is what's right to think, this is what's correct." And people aren't afraid to use death threats now and really, really hateful speech. Doesn't seem like we've learned a lot.

It's scary how with social media you can create your own echo chamber.

Yeah, you listen to the groups that you want to listen to and you don't listen to anybody else. That's as far as I want to go with that. I don't want to get into privacy and all that stuff, which has no bearing here. Well … it does, because it's the privacy of a person to have their own beliefs and wishes and not have to share them with anyone else or really have to explain them if they're perfectly legal to have.

Almost three decades with the Coens

You've had such a long and fruitful working relationship with the Coen Brothers, starting in 1987.

It started off with the audition for "Raising Arizona," and I just felt so comfortable. The script was dynamite. It was the funniest thing I'd ever read. And it was just loose. I didn't go in there desperate for a job or anything like that, but I wound up having such a good time with them that the audition itself was worth the price of admission. We just hung out for a while. Then they wrote a couple of roles with me in mind. Yeah, it's been cool.

Here's to female heroes who are strong and complex

Natalie Dormer's Cressida and Jennifer Lawrence's Katniss Everdeen in "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay — Part 2" are two of the strong, complex female characters on screens this weekend. MURRAY CLOSE

This is going to be quite a weekend for fans of strong and complex heroines. On Friday, we're getting the final installment in the "Hunger Games" series, "Mockingjay — Part 2." We're also going to mark the release of the next Marvel series on Netflix, "Jessica Jones."

As much as I wish this weren't significant, it is. What we're going to see are strong women, but ones with flaws, meaning they'll actually resemble real people.

I know that sounds a bit strange, but think about a lot of the "strong female characters" we're used to. They get to be tough or vulnerable or a love interest. I've talked about this many times before, but today I'm thrilled to say that we're seeing more well-rounded people.

In Katniss Everdeen and Jessica Jones, we have women dealing with PTSD. With Katniss, it's from the horrors she experienced in the games and the manipulation of Peeta, her closest friend and maybe romantic interest who has been turned against her through torture by the government of District 13.

We don't see Katniss as a one-dimensional hero — something we often see with male action heroes as well — kicking ass, having a dark or touching moment here and there, but mostly shooting up enemies with a smirk on her face and a hot costume. We see her actually reacting to the trauma she's experienced. I think that's why she's so beloved. We like to think that if we were in a situation like that, we'd kick ass too. But once the action ends, there would be an emotional aftermath to deal with as well, and we're allowed to see hints that these characters' actions and experiences have consequences for them.

We'll see that in Jessica Jones as well. Fans of the comics know that this character was a former superhero who was mentally manipulated by The Purple Man. After enduring months of doing terrible things while under his control, she's left the superhero business and started up as a private investigator. As we can see from the promos, she's dealing with the consequences and not really doing it very well. This is something we can all relate to.

I'm thrilled that we're getting more real characters, especially in terms of women. I'll be calling in sick to work on Friday to drink it all in. Anyone else?

Rodrigo Santoro's Zen experience on 'The 33'

Shooting the drama "The 33" in the desert was mostly a good time for the "300" star.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Gabriel Byrne and Rodrigo Santoro play part of the rescue team trying to save miners trapped miles below the surface in "The 33." WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Brazilian actor Rodrigo Santoro has traveled all over, doing everything from English dramedy ("Love Actually") to American action ("The Last Stand"). He was even an aggressively-pierced giant Xerxes in the "300" movies. For "The 33," about the 2010 Chilean mine collapse, he got to mix it up with an international cast, with members from Spain (Antonio Banderas), Ireland (Gabriel Byrne) and France (Juliette Binoche). He plays Laurence Golborne, who goes from being an ineffectual mining minister to helping organize the international rescue mission.

GETTY IMAGES

First off: What's it like to be slapped by Juliette Binoche?

It was an honor. It's something I will definitely tell my grandkids.

You spend a lot of your early scenes being screamed at by large groups. What is that like, even if it's staged?

Among the extras, we had people who were actually there [during the real incident]. So I would get surprised in the middle of shooting: They were shouting at me, cursing at me. But it was a very Zen exercise, because this guy was in the center of a huge storm, with pressure from every angle. He was like a manager who doesn't have any experience. Those were the questions I asked [the real Golborne] when I met him. I wasn't interested in imitating him, it wasn't about his behavior. It was like, "How did you do it? How many nights did you actually sleep?"

You weren't part of the cast that had to act in an actual mine, but you were still in the desert.

It was great and it was harsh. Around 3 p.m. was the strongest — just hot and intense and dry. We were in the middle of the desert. I was out there in the sun, with lots of water and very little food. But it was incredibly, incredibly unique — the landscape, the atmosphere, the silence. I would just walk and sit down and listen to the silence. It immediately puts you in a very particular place. It makes you go within yourself. It made you dive down and everybody inside your mind is just talking. There was the most eloquent silence I've ever heard. It's a different dimension. Maybe I was tripping — not tripping-tripping, but naturally tripping with the environment. It was a pure immersion.

MARLEY SPOON

Tomato Soup with Broccoli Grilled Cheese

There are few things better than grilled cheese and tomato soup. Except, maybe, this grilled cheese with a secret layer of roasted crispy broccoli tucked inside. Serve the soup poured right over the sandwiches or serve them alongside for dipping. Cook, relax and enjoy!

Cooking time: 30 minutes
Attributes: vegetarian
Calories: 930
Allergens: gluten, milk

What we send
- 8 oz broccoli (1 crown, 7–8 oz)
- 2 yellow onions (1 lb total)
- 3 cloves garlic (0.6 oz)
- fresh thyme sprigs (0.08 oz)
- 1 28-oz can whole peeled tomatoes (San Marzano)
- 8 oz vegetable broth
- 2 Tbsp butter (4 pats)
- 8 oz Gruyère
- 8 slices whole grain bread (2 oz each)

What you need
- olive oil
- coarse salt
- freshly ground black pepper

Equipment
- rimmed baking sheet
- box grater
- large pot

Directions:

1 Roast broccoli
Preheat oven to 425°F. Trim end from broccoli and, starting from the bottom, thinly slice crosswise all the way through the florets; transfer to a rimmed baking sheet. Toss with 2 tablespoons oil and ½ teaspoon salt. Roast until golden and crispy, 10–15 minutes.

2 Sauté vegetables
Trim, halve, and peel onions, then coarsely grate on large holes of box grater. Peel and finely chop garlic. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in a large pot over medium-high. Add onions, garlic and 1 teaspoon salt. Cook, stirring often, until tender and golden, 6–8 minutes.

3 Simmer soup
Pick thyme leaves from sprigs and add to pot. Add tomatoes, breaking up with a spoon, and cook until slightly reduced, about 5 minutes. Add vegetable broth, 2 cups water, ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper and bring to a simmer. Cook until slightly reduced, about 10 minutes.

4 Build sandwiches
Unwrap butter to soften. Grate cheese on large holes of box grater. Butter 1 side of each slice of bread. Top unbuttered side of 4 slices with cheese and roasted broccoli, then top with another slice, butter side out.

5 Cook sandwiches
Heat a large skillet over medium. Add sandwiches, working in batches if necessary, and cook, pressing down gently and turning once, until bread is golden brown and cheese is melted, about 2 minutes per side.

6 Blend soup
Transfer soup to a blender (or use an immersion blender) and purée until smooth. Season to taste, adding a little more water if needed to thin; drizzle with oil and season with pepper. Cut sandwiches in half, in strips, or squares and serve with soup. Enjoy!

Casey Veggies stays rooted in family values

The 22-year-old rapper is friends with big players in the hip-hop game, but his new single features someone he's even closer to: his dad.

CHRIS JORDAN
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Casey Veggies' hit single "Backflip," which features YG and Iamsu!, generated more than three million views on YouTube. The rapper has performed with Kendrick Lamar, Rockie Fresh and Juicy J — he's friends with many seasoned artists in the rap game. But for his new track, "I'm the King," he chose to feature his dad over a boldfaced name.

All in the family

After all, his dad knows the biz. He's a former bodyguard for Jay Z. "He's always like that voice of reason for me," says Veggies, aka Casey Jones. "If I'm moving too fast and not thinking, he's always that person who can give me some advice. He doesn't always tell me what I want to hear — he tells what he feels I should hear."

Finding his focus

Veggies is an Inglewood, California, native who was part of the influential Odd Future collective. He started young. "I made my first mixtape when I was in ninth grade and people started to check me out, listening to it and vibing to it," Veggies says. "It was in 11th grade when I realized this is what I wanted to do."

Musical growth

The name of Veggies' album, "Live & Grow," reflects his advancement in music. "Live & Grow" is multi-textured, showing an ability to approach the music from different perspectives.

The ladies' jam "Tied Up" features a hook by DeJ Loaf and a clever double entendre — she can tie her hair up and won't say no to a little bondage play in the boudoir. "Backflip" is a club banger with a poppy synth groove and "Actin' Up," with Dom Kennedy, celebrates life in the fast lane with a mesmerizing twangy guitar sample.

Not slowing down

But beyond the bright lights, "Live & Grow" is a tale of the artist coming to terms with the world around him. "I'm a young kid, 22, I'm out here dreaming big, trying to find out what's the next step," he says.

Besides his accelerating music career,Veggies also has a Puma sponsorship, a clothing line (Peas & Carats) and a national tour. "I'm going to keep it all going," he says. "I'm going to stay on the grind."

A sweet start at Little Bird Bakery

Jessica Nolen is now whipping up treats in a sunny space off South Street — and feeding your Thanksgiving guests.

CAROLINE RUSSOCK
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Jessica Nolen's dreams of owning a bakery began at a young age. She came up with a concept she called Bob and Anne's, named for her grandparents.

"My grandmother cooked a lot, but my grandfather was the baker," says Nolen. "He'd make zucchini bread, chocolate chip cookies, just silly stuff that was super-easy. I thought it was the coolest thing ever."

Now, years later with plenty of experience heading up the pastry programs at Brauhaus Schmitz and Whetstone Tavern, she's struck out on her own with Little Bird. It's a sunny bakery on Fifth Street, just off South.

The concept of the bakery had been in the works for a while, and when the former Cookie Confidential space opened up the opportunity was too good to pass up — even though Nolen and her husband, Jeremy, were in the process of opening Whetstone Tavern.

"This is what I've always wanted," she says, looking back at the open kitchen and seating area. "I wanted a space where I could bake and also communicate with people, because I've been in the basement for seven years now."

The subterranean workspaces that acted as her pastry kitchens at both restaurants couldn't be more different from her new digs. With west-facing floor-to-ceiling windows and a gleaming pressed tin ceiling, Little Bird is sunny and inviting.

ALL PHOTOS CAROLINE RUSSOCK

This is a place to grab breakfast and coffee or a mid-afternoon slice of pie. Or just swing by and pick up a loaf of freshly-baked bread — along with your weekly CSA box from Lancaster Farm Fresh. (Nolen has volunteered her new bakery as a drop-off point.)

The opening menu reads like a greatest hits from the desserts and breads that she created for Brauhaus and Whetstone.

There are deep brown Bavarian pretzels, a standout hazelnut torte from Brauhaus and a lemon meringue cheesecake that won raves from Craig LaBan at Whetstone.

Among the morning offerings sure to make Little Bird an instant neighborhood go-to spot: options like pressed egg and cheese sandwiches on Texas toast (with a cheddar butter spread!) and raspberry and brie croissant rolls. Plus, there's even a secret recipe for chocolate milk.

Thanksgiving dessert

Shoe leather-like crusts and crooked crimping are only the beginning of the pitfalls that amateur home bakers encounter when endeavoring to make Thanksgiving desserts. Why not leave the last course to the pros?

Nolen's holiday menu of pies, cheesecakes, bread pudding and a particularly showstopping hazelnut mousse torte are all designed to feed a crowd. They also come with something extra: a bespoke ice cream, whipped cream, topping or sauce packaged separately for at-home spooning.

The classic apple pie is complemented by condensed milk ice cream perfect for serving a la mode, and a bourbon custard pecan pie is getting candied orange whipped cream to finish it off. Caramel pretzel bread pudding comes with Whoppers-inspired malted whipped cream and that incredible hazelnut torte (a Brauhaus Schmitz favorite) gets a side of sweet-tart sour cherry sauce. Preorder them by calling 267-519-2313 or email chefjessicanolan@gmail.com and pick them up at the bakery on Nov. 26.

Party at the pop-up club

Josh Wink DIed at 714 the night before Halloween. PROVIDED

Forget sleek and modern — raw space is taking over.

A.D. AMOROSI
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

If you hear loud dance music coming from long-empty clubs and conservative event spaces this weekend, there aren't ghosts of DJs past afoot.

Samba nightclub's former home, 714 Girard, is holding an electro-dance jam with Making Time DJs and a live guest, HEALTH, Friday. On Saturday, the Skybox Event Center (2424 E. York St.) hosts a reunion for long-running nightclub Shampoo, with DJs Robbie Tronco and Nigel Richards. Welcome to the pop-up club, where promoters and DJs take over raw spaces and remake them in their image.

The Skybox, once a factory, is a roomy 11,000 square feet, with plenty of brick and wooden beams lending an industrial vibe. It has, until this weekend's Shampoo party, held corporate events and the occasional fashion show. "An unfinished look, you can make it into anything," says Dan Contarino, a promoter for the Shampoo reunion.

The same holds for the 9,000-square-foot 714 Girard, where new owner Billy Weiss is opening the doors to promoters. "I thought we'd start quietly," says Weiss, referring to 714's soft-opening weekend: Mischief Night with trance spinner Josh Wink and Halloween with DJ Dave Pianka's Making Time. "Now," Weiss says, "there are parties at 714 every weekend, and that's without me putting out feelers."

Weiss is busy with his Gayborhood clubs Woody's and Voyeur, the latter recently renovated from its grungier former appearance to something "sleek and mainstream," he says, to accommodate that area's weekend rush.

"Thousands of people pile out of restaurants with nowhere to go but our clubs," Weiss says happily of Voyeur's new look and bookings. "Still, I wanted to make sure promoters I've worked with who are adventurous and can pack a house had someplace to play."

"An unfinished look you can make it into anything."

promoter Dan Contarino

Weiss makes it clear that he merely owns 714's building, officially the private, after-hours Arcadia Social Club. He makes the promoters members of the private club before an event starts, and the crowd becomes members upon entry.

Making Time used to have its wild parties at Voyeur — its rough-edged dance music and electro-punk bands suited the messy club. "But Voyeur's new look didn't work for us, so Billy immediate made 714 available," says Pianka. "I like it. It's raw, warehouse-y." That should work wonders for HEALTH, who are hitting up 714 to promote their new album, "Death Magic."

Matt Brookman, Josh Wink's partner at the Ovum label, agrees. "When we walked into 714 for Hallowink on Mischief Night, we immediately knew we found a new home," says Brookman. Ovum's crew is so pleased, their next 714 gig is the all-important Thanksgiving Eve.

5 Treasures of Byzantine Istanbul

Your first ports of call in Turkey's buzzing metropolis are probably its famous Ottoman mosques and palaces, but its Byzantine beauties are worth exploring too.

Mosaic Museum

1 Chora Church (Kariye Museum)
This tucked-away 11th-century church, now a museum, has an unadorned exterior of dense terra-cotta brick. But inside you'll see intricate 14th-century frescoes and mosaics on the domes and walls, considered some of the world's finest surviving Byzantine art. Golden mosaics illustrate scenes from the life of Christ and the Virgin Mary, with frescoes depicting Old Testament scenes. Like many churches here, it was converted to a mosque in 1511, soon after the Ottoman Conquest, and the art was plastered over. Thankfully, this helped to preserve them until they were uncovered a century ago.

2 Hagia Sophia
This hulking, dusky red building is a masterpiece of Byzantine architecture, rebuilt in the mid-sixth century under Emperor Justinian I. With a 184-foot-high dome and sturdy pillars, its darkened interior is adorned with intricate mosaics of Christ with Emperor Constantine IX and his wife Empress Zoe, and the Madonna and Child. Head upstairs to the gallery for a better view. After conquering Istanbul in 1453, Sultan Mehmet II ordered it to be cleansed and converted to a mosque. Outside, you'll see a fifth-century Byzantine frieze of sheep, one of the few remnants of the original structure.

3 Yerebatan Sarnici (Basilica Cistern)
This sixth-century subterranean cistern brought thousands of tons of water into the city. Today there are walkways eerily lit by red spotlights set between 336 columns. Scenes of the 1963 Bond film "From Russia With Love" were filmed here. Head to the northwest corner to see two Roman Medusa heads carved in stone. Ouside is the Million Stone, a Byzantine landmark marking the distances to other cities of the Empire.

4 Mosaic Museum
Break away from the Arasta Bazaar and enter through what remains of the Great Palace, once the headquarters of Emperor Justinian. It's now home to the Mosaic Museum, with huge sixth-century mosaics of lively hunting scenes, mythical beasts and all manner of nonreligious scenes. They're a far cry from the austere Biblical scenes of other Byzantine mosaics but a fascinating insight into the everyday artwork of the time.

5 Church of St. Mary of the Mongols
The downside of this hidden-away church, tucked behind a high wall in Fener, is that it's not regularly open to the public. But if you get access (ring the bell for the caretaker) you'll be seeing the only Byzantine church that remained in Greek hands and was never converted to a mosque. Inside are tiny icons and shrines and a secret underground passageway that led all the way to the Hagia Sophia.

Holiday shopping in the Big Apple

You might start with the stores along Fifth Avenue, but New York is filled with shops selling unique gifts for friends, family and yourself.

The "districts" — the centers for certain businesses — have good buys for specific items. The Diamond District (47th Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues) is wholesale heaven for jewels. The Perfume District is on Broadway, between 20th and 30th streets. The Garment District is the place to look for fabrics (25th to 40th, between Fifth and Ninth avenues).

Butchers no longer inhabit the Meatpacking District (West 14th and Gansevoort Street west of Hudson Street) and its now the hottest, trendiest place in the city. This is the place for the top boutiques. Name the label; the store is here.

> Shop at Artists and Fleas, where rotating artisans sell everything from boots to toiletries.

Just north is Chelsea, where the vibe is lively and less pretentious, and the shopping is eclectic and affordable. The "must" is Chelsea Market. It's a theme park of food with 35 vendors selling delicacies from around the world. But there's much more. At Artists and Fleas, 30 artisans sell steam punk jewelry, custom boots and leatherwork, handcrafted stationery, real vinyl LPs, menswear and toiletries. The artists rotate every few weeks. Check out Imports from Marrakesh for Moroccan tiles, leather, home and garden accessories, and Spices and Tease for original spice blends and imported teas.

Greenwich Village is another shopping destination. Just south of the Meatpacking District, its counterculture image is strong, which makes for fun and funky shopping. It's a mélange of boutiques, vintage clothing shops, the iconic Strand bookstore (with 18 miles of aisles); Tea and Sympathy for everything British; and locally made Li-Lac Chocolates.

If "ti amo" defines your attitude toward Italy, visit Eataly (200 Fifth Ave.), where Oscar Ferinetti shows off as much Italian food as can fit under one very large roof. Pick up small production and organic wines at the Vinyl Wine shop (1491 Lexington Ave.), then find unique dinnerware at Fishs Eddy (889 Broadway). Global Table (107 Sullivan St.) sells quietly elegant tableware.

Beyond the districts, fashionistas on a budget gravitate to the Century 21 Department Store (1972 Building in Lincoln Square, 22 Cortland St., and 21 Dey St.), where designer fashions are 40 percent to 65 percent off. Another "budget" designer stop is Bis Designer Resale (1134 Madison Ave.) for "slightly worn" fashions.

There's no complete list of great stores, but the official NYC website, Nycgo.com, is a good starting point for more ideas. It's also the go-to for information on accommodations, dining, entertainment and getting around.

NHL power rankings | by Rich Slate

No. 1

Rangers (14-2-2)

Finally, a little shakeup at the top of the power rankings. New York is on fire as it has won its last nine games in a row. It's off to its best start in franchise history. New York is tied for the best goal-differential in the NHL (plus-25) and has allowed the fewest goals.

No. 2

Stars (15-4-0)

The Rangers, Stars and Canadiens have clearly separated themselves as the NHL's elite teams so far this season. The Stars have won their last three games and are 8-2-0 in their last 10. Dallas' explosive offensive has scored an NHL-best 68 goals.

No. 3

Canadiens (14-3-2)

Colorado came to the Bell Centre and beat Montreal 6-1 on Saturday, the most shocking result thus far in 2015-16. Goaltender Carey Price was at practice on Wednesday so he should be returning to game action shortly — great news for the Canadiens and their fans.

No. 4

Predators (11-3-3)

For now, Nashville is the second-best team in the West. The Predators will be celebrating Thanksgiving on the road as their next five games are away from the Music City. They have the second-best goal-differential in the West (plus-13) and they have allowed the second-fewest goals (40).

No. 5

Kings (12-6-0)

The Kings have won their last three games. They're 7-3-0 in their last 10, so they can reclaim first place in the Pacific Division. They've allowed the fewest goals in the West (38) and are 5-1-0 on the road this season. LA kicked off its five-game road trip with a 3-2 shootout win in Philadelphia on Tuesday.

No. 6

Blues (12-6-1)

The Blues would be in first or second place in any other division but their own (Central). As far as losses go, Tuesday's 3-1 setback in Columbus was pretty bad. Even worse, center Jori Lehtera (2 goals, 8 assists) left that game and went to the hospital after taking a stick to the throat area.

No. 7

Capitals (11-4-1)

The Capitals aren't playing poorly (6-3-1 in last 10 games) but the Rangers have created some distance between them (seven points). In all likelihood, the Caps will be playing for second-place all season because it's hard to see the Rangers getting caught (barring major injuries).

No. 8

Wild (10-4-3)

The Wild would be in second place in every other division but the Central, where they reside in fourth place. Oh, and they are just two points ahead of Chicago, so good luck with that. All hope is not lost for Minnesota, though, because it has the best home record in the West (7-1-0).

No. 28

Flyers (6-8-4)

No team in the NHL is playing worse than the Flyers, who are 2-6-2 in their last 10 games. Rookie defenseman Shayne Gostisbehere scored his first career NHL goal in Tuesday's 3-2 shootout loss to the Kings. He could be a big part of what Philly hopes is a much brighter future.

NHL

Flyers host another good team, Sharks, Thursday

The Flyers looked like a potent team despite a shootout loss to the Kings Tuesday. With very little going well recently for Philly, it's a small moral victory — and one they hope to build on.

"I guess there's the silver lining, but at the end of the day we are in the business of winning and we didn't do that tonight," Steve Mason said after the 3-2 decision. "We can feel good that we had a pretty solid game, but at the end of the day we can't be satisfied because we didn't get to win."

San Jose (10-8) comes to town fresh off three straight wins, including one in Boston. The Flyers, who often play to the level of their opponent, are hoping to get two points against a tough west-coast foe Thursday, at 7 p.m. (on CSN).

"We have to find a way to play consistently, whether it's a good team or a bad team," Claude Giroux said. "If we want to be successful, we have to do that game in and game out." EVAN MACY

Ghost of Flyers' future making an immediate impact on team

Rookie defenseman Shayne Gostisbehere could be a valuable piece on the Flyers' attack for years to come.

ERIC GOLDSTEIN

The future of the Flyers arrived over the weekend.

Well, at least a piece of it did.

General manager Ron Hextall recalled defenseman Shayne Gostisbehere from the Lehigh Valley Phantoms on Saturday to replace Mark Streit, who will miss 4-6 weeks with a pubic plate detachment. Gostisbehere, appropriately nicknamed "Ghost," is one of the many prized young defensive prospects in the organization.

The 22-year-old, who impressed the coaching staff and front office in training camp, has already made a huge impact in just his first two games with the Flyers.

He showed off his offensive potential by assisting on the game-tying goal late in the third period with a flashy move during Saturday's 3-2 overtime win against the Hurricanes in his season debut. For an encore, Gostisbehere scored his first NHL goal on the power play in the first period in Tuesday's 3-2 shoot out loss to the Kings.

"The coaches told me it's my time to do what I do," Gostisbehere told reporters in Carolina. " … I am just trying to make plays and not get caught out of position too much."

Gostisbehere adds an element the Flyers have sorely lacked, or quite frankly, don't currently have on their blueline. He's a speedy defenseman who can carry the puck out of his own zone, make a long outlet pass to start a rush, possesses a quick trigger and is an extra weapon on offense. He was even used on the first unit of the power play.

"I'm really impressed. He's extremely polite, extremely talented, he's very calm out there."

Flyers goalie Steve Mason, on Shayne Gostisbehere

"You can tell his confidence is building, and he's playing some good hockey for us right now," forward Brayden Schenn said Tuesday night. "He shoots a lot of pucks and gets a lot of pucks through. He's got good hands, and he's fun to be out there with."

He had his first cup of coffee last season when he played in two games with the Flyers. Shortly after returning to the Phantoms, though, he sustained a torn ACL injury that cost him the rest of the season.

Following his excellent training camp in the fall, Gostisbehere had two goals, both on the power play, and eight assists in 14 games with the Phantoms.

"Now the opportunity is here [with the Flyers]," head coach Dave Hakstol said. "You take and seize that opportunity."

With Streit gone until at least Christmas, this is Gostisbehere's extended chance to claim a permanent roster spot in Philadelphia.

He is no doubt off to a solid start.

"I don't know how long I will be here," Gostisbehere said. "I am just going out there and playing. I am going to do my best out there to help the team."

Former boss of Phillies' new GM Klentak says he's a good fit

Dan O'Down sat down for an exclusive one-on-one chat with Metro.

ED CONDRAN
@MetroPhilly
sports@metro.us

Dan O'Dowd, a former co-worker of Phils GM Matt Klentak, got his fare share of champaign showers with the Rockies. GETTY IMAGES

When Matt Klentak joined the Colorado Rockies as an intern in 2003, the first general manager he dealt with was MLB analyst Dan O'Dowd. The longtime Rockies GM, who called the shots for Colorado from 1999 to 2014, chatted with Metro about Klentak, what the Phillies should do next season and how the future looks for Pete Mackanin's team.

You've known Matt Klentak for a long time. How good of a fit is he for the Phillies as general manager?
Matt is a very good choice for a number of reasons. Matt is very smart but he doesn't try to be the smartest guy in the room like a lot of young people have to be. But that's not him since he's a secure guy. He's a very patient guy and he's steady. That's something the Phillies need. Matt is also a very good collaborator and is a good listener. I can see why the Phillies selected him as their GM.

How do the Phillies look right now?
They're looking better thanks to the deals that Ruben [Amaro] made last year. The Phillies future looks bright. But what they should do this offseason is be patient and play their young players.

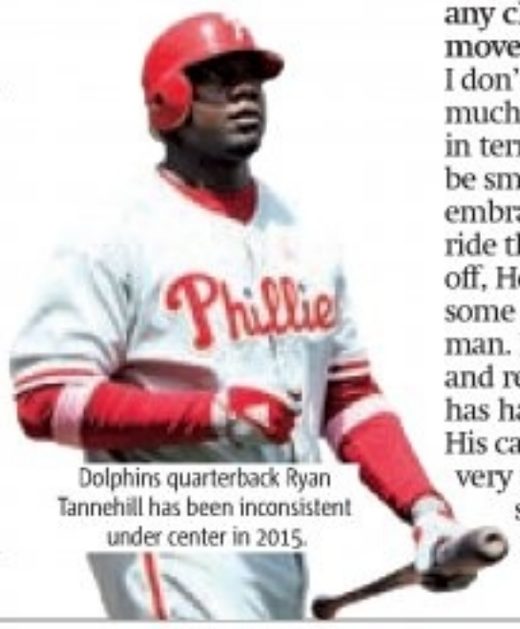
What do you make of Ruben Amaro accepting a first base coach gig with the Red Sox?
I always thought Ruben wanted to be in uniform. After you play for a number of years in Major League Baseball, like he did, you don't feel that same rush when you're a general manager.

The trade he made, which was most impressive, appears to be the Rangers deal.
What was great about that trade is that it was a good old fashioned baseball trade. It helped both teams. I saw lot of those kids the Phillies acquired, and they are impressive. The young catcher [Jorge Alfaro] has a lot to learn defensively but he's a tremendous athlete. He would be a good reason to keep Carlos Ruiz around, to help with his development. Nick Williams has a lot of talent. Jake Thompson could be an impact starter and I like [Jerad] Eickhoff, who could be a starter too. I'm not saying that all four are going to be starters for the Phillies. But they very well could be, and that would make that an outstanding trade for the Phillies.

Ken Giles has been bandied about as a trade chip. Would you deal him?
A general manager's job is to always listen. I always had an ear open when I was with the Rockies. If a team is willing to overpay for someone, then maybe you make a deal involving Giles. If someone tries to blow the Phillies away with an offer for Giles, well, you better listen. If they will not overpay, keep him. He's young, controllable for years and looks like he'll be a really good closer for a long time.

Is Pete Mackanin the right choice as Phillies manager?
He's perfect for the Phillies, since Pete Mackanin is one of the best teachers in the game. He's great with clubhouse culture. He's perfect for the kids on that team.

Do you think there's any chance Klentak can move Ryan Howard?
I don't think there is much Matt can do there in terms of a trade. He'll be smart enough to embrace Howard and ride the storm out. First off, Howard isn't blocking some young first baseman. Play him next year and realize that Howard has had a fantastic career. His career numbers are very impressive. I don't see him leaving Philadelphia.



Dolphins quarterback Ryan Tannehill has been inconsistent under center in 2015.

Aries Life is full of surprises. You will be given some interesting opportunities that will enable you to choose a direction that could bring stability.

Taurus Don't be fooled by someone looking for a handout. A sob story is meant to make you feel bad. Protect your assets.

Gemini You'll face complaints if you don't live up to a promise. Take care of responsibilities so that you can move on to more enjoyable pastimes.

Cancer You can expand your interests and knowledge if you research or travel to different philosophies or destinations.

Leo Put your heart into being your best. Trying a new look, honing your skills or finding a way to turn what you do best into a profitable endeavor.

Virgo You will have plenty of insight into ways to overcome any obstacles you face. Live within your means in order to ease stress.

Libra You are in dire need of a change. Update your image or join a club or group that offers opportunities to meet experienced people.

Scorpio If you are true to yourself, you will have no regrets. Implement interesting changes to your current plans to reach a new level of success.

Sagittarius You'll be criticized if you are shortsighted regarding what you can handle. You'll fall behind if you are too ambitious.

Capricorn Speak up and see what others have to say. Talks will lead to insightful suggestions and the promise of the support you need.

Aquarius A unique concept, philosophy or service will attract your attention. Consider ways to utilize your skill set with what you've discovered.

Pisces A settlement is heading your way. Have a plan ready to put any extra cash you receive into a practical long-term investment. EUGENIA LAST
